NOTES:

- There'll be two ways to be directed to this "Add your brain" section. The first is by clicking on a tab from the main homepage of GIST. The second should happen when a user searches a book in the main gist home page, and we have no results for that book. Then they should automatically be redirected here, with a message telling them that we don't have the book so we would like them to add their brain and make a summary.

- When users upload their material we should get the uploaded materials tagged to make it easy to be searched for later. (Fiction vs. non fiction, main category(economics, philosophy, etc.))

- When a user initiates a book, and is looking for members to collaborate with, we think that the site should be able to send an email or a message to the inbox of users who might be interested. (Based on if their preferred genres, or authors, match with the genre/author of the book that is in progress)

- When a user initiates a book, and another user wants to join and collaborate on that book, the user who initiated the book should be able to preview the applicant and decide whether or not to accept/reject the applicant.

- Users who have specified how they want to contribute in the "I want to contribute by" section should be recommended to people searching for participants on a book summary that matches that skillset. For example, if puya registers that he wants to contribute by filming, and Doyin initiates a book summary, and through the form points out that he needs someone to film, then puya, and other people who want to contribute by filming should be made known to Doyin.
